

Bordeaux, France

July 4-7, 2010

INVITATION

You are cordially invited to participate to the 3rd International Conference on Hypervalent Iodine Chemistry (ICHIC2010), which will be held in Bordeaux, France. The conference will begin on Sunday evening, July 4, and will end on Wednesday noon, July 7, 2010.

The objective of the ICHIC2010 is to bring together academic and industrial scientists to discuss all aspects of the chemistry of hypervalent iodine compounds, from the structure, reactivity and design of new variants to their utilization in synthetic methodologies and application in natural products synthesis. Papers on these topics will constitute the scientific program of the conference, which will include invited lectures, short talks and poster presentations.

LOCATION AND TRAVEL

Bordeaux is a modern and dynamic metropolis, with a population of over 700,000, yet the city has managed to preserve its magnificent 18th century heritage. Mostly known worldwide for its vineyards and gourmet food, Bordeaux has also recently been officially selected as a UNESCO World Heritage site in recognition of the beauty and the unity of style of its architectural heritage.

By F. Poincet (Office de Tourisme de Bordeaux)
